

ISS Media Policy Regarding Proxy Research Reports (March 2019)

Institutional Shareholder Services (ISS) endeavors to assist journalists covering stories of interest to our clients, and more generally to followers of financial markets, by providing, where appropriate, research, data, analytics, and expert commentary. All requests from the media should be directed in writing to press@issgovernance.com for matters relating to: corporate-level news; global proxy research and recommendations; data and analytics; securities class action services; and ISS Corporate Solutions, while media requests relating to responsible investment and ESG matters should be directed to press@iss-esg.com.

While recognizing that our proxy research is for the benefit of our clients and not other constituents, ISS believes it is appropriate to provide select proxy research to certain widely recognized and publicly accessible media outlets, but only upon request (and never in advance of delivery to ISS clients), in instances where we believe the public may benefit from the information and in keeping with ISS' commitment to transparency. Proxy research provided to media outlets must generally contain the same disclaimers and/or qualifications or limitations on use that would apply to the delivery of such research to any third party in the ordinary course. ISS will hold on the provision to media of any proxy research reports covered by ISS' Special Situations Research team for 24 hours after publication to clients. ISS does not issue press releases with respect to its voting recommendations. Proxy research will not be made available to the media prior to its dissemination to ISS clients, and ISS staff will generally not comment on company-specific situations in advance of a shareholder meeting. When provided, proxy research reports are provided as a courtesy, and ISS reserves the right to withhold the provision of its research and related information for any reason.

Any redistribution of ISS research or data is expressly prohibited without the prior written consent of ISS. Permission to copy and reproduce content may be granted by ISS, at its discretion, and by written request only.

ISS reserves the right to interpret and apply this Media Policy Regarding Proxy Research Reports as it sees fit, as well as to amend or alter the policy at its discretion.
